Computer Employment Training Program

The proceeds of this event are designated for Computer Employment Training Program, which provides individuals with disabilities the skills and knowledge they need to operate a computer efficiently. The training they receive enables them to be competitively employed. The computer lab contains 25 client workstations designed to allow individuals to learn a variety of clerical and technical skills at their own pace. Various methods are used to present the material, including hands-on, audio-visual, group creativity exercises and tutorial software. Through individual and small group instruction, participants learn computer skills such as basic keyboarding, data entry, publishing and cash register operation. Adaptive equipment is available for those in need of special accommodations, including special mice, magnified monitors, etc. Special software, such as Dragon Voice Activated, is also available. This training has directly or indirectly resulted in employment placements in supermarkets, restaurants, hotels, assisted living facilities, retail stores, hospitals, etc. Not all of the computer trainees secure positions in an office environment, but this training is necessary regardless of their final employment destination.
